In this memoir, a young woman embarks on a cross-country road trip after losing her job and her relationship. Along the way, she meets a cast of unforgettable characters and learns valuable lessons about herself and the world around her.

The author's journey begins in San Francisco, where she is living a comfortable but unfulfilling life. She has a good job, a nice apartment, and a supportive group of friends. But she can't shake the feeling that there is something more to life than what she is currently experiencing.

One day, the author loses her job. This is a major blow, but it also gives her the opportunity to finally make a change in her life. She decides to sell her apartment and hit the road in her car. She has no idea where she is going or what she will do, but she is determined to find her purpose in life.

The author's road trip takes her through some of the most beautiful and remote parts of the country. She meets a wide variety of people along the way, from friendly strangers to wise old mentors. She learns about different cultures and ways of life. And she begins to discover who she is and what she wants out of life.

The author's journey is not always easy. She faces challenges and setbacks along the way. But she never gives up on her dream of finding her purpose in life. And in the end, she succeeds. She finds a new job that she loves, she meets a wonderful new partner, and she discovers a passion for writing.

Changing One Way of Walking in the World is a story of hope, resilience, and transformation. It is a story that will inspire readers to follow their dreams and never give up on themselves.
