Colored Water Dixie is a powerful and moving account of one man's journey to find his place in the world.

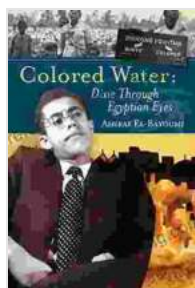

Wortham was born in Mississippi in 1936. He grew up in a segregated society, and he experienced firsthand the racism and discrimination that was rampant in the South at that time. In the 1960s, Wortham decided to leave the United States and travel to Egypt. He was drawn to Egypt by its rich history and culture, and he hoped to find a more tolerant and accepting society there.

When Wortham arrived in Egypt, he was immediately struck by the country's beauty and diversity. He was also impressed by the friendliness and hospitality of the Egyptian people. However, Wortham also experienced some culture shock. He was not used to the way that women were treated in Egypt, and he was surprised by the poverty that he saw.

Despite these initial challenges, Wortham eventually came to love Egypt. He learned to appreciate the country's unique culture and traditions, and he made many friends there. Wortham's experiences in Egypt changed his life. He returned to the United States a more open-minded and tolerant person, and he dedicated his life to fighting for social justice.
