Doe's writing is relatable and honest, and she doesn't shy away from the challenges of family life. She writes about the sleepless nights, the power struggles, and the moments of pure frustration that all parents experience. But she also writes about the love, the laughter, and the deep sense of connection that make family life so special.

Sleepovers, Squabbles, Tuna Fish, and Other Facts of Family Life is a must-read for anyone who has ever been a part of a family. It's a book that will make you laugh, cry, and cherish the people you love most.

Here's a sneak peek inside the book:

"I remember the first time my sister, Sarah, and I had a sleepover. We were so excited! We stayed up all night talking, laughing, and eating junk food. We thought we were so grown-up.

But then, in the middle of the night, Sarah started crying. She said she was scared of the dark. I tried to comfort her, but she wouldn't stop crying.

Finally, I got out of bed and went to get my mom. She came into our room and hugged Sarah. She told her that everything was going to be okay and that she was there to protect her.

Sarah calmed down after that, and we were able to go back to sleep. But I never forgot that night. It was the night I realized that even though Sarah and I were sisters, we were also best friends. We were there for each other, no matter what.

Sleepovers, Squabbles, Tuna Fish, and Other Facts of Family Life is a book about all the different aspects of family life. It's about the good times, the bad times, and the everything-in-between times. It's a book about the love, the laughter, and the unbreakable bonds that make family life so special."
